CANDIDATE INTERVIEW:

Lyon wants to make fighting crime the new priority in West Sac

By Steve Marschke

JEFF LYON

Jeff Lyon wants to make changes on the West Sacramento's city council – perhaps more so than anybody else on the ballot.

Almost two years ago, Lyon and his wife bought an 1897 Victorian in the "Washington" neighborhood, a couple of blocks from the state Department of General Services offices (which are in the ziggurat building. He's been working in those offices for some time. After moving in, Lyon started talking to his new neighbors in West Sacramento.

"It was a shock to my wife and me to hear that many of the neighbors had just got used to the fact that there are homeless transients and panhandlers and beggars walking the streets," he told the News-Ledger. "Almost all of my

CANDIDATE INTERVIEW:

Alcala hopes to be most accessible school board member in town

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

NORMA ALCALA

Norma Alcala hopes to get elected to a West Sacramento school board that she feels is already doing a great job.

"I'm proud of everyone on the school board," she told the News-Ledger last week. "We have an excellent school board."

If she's voted in, Alcala said she would concentrate on sharing ideas with both the schools and the community.

"I want to be the most accessible school board member," she commented. "I give everyone my cell phone number, 916-821-9639. People have to feel – parents, especially – that somebody is reaching out."

That meshes with her view on the fundamentals of a school board member's job duties.

"I think accessibility is the most important thing – the willingness to listen to what people have to say, to learn from what people have to say, to invite people into the conversation and find out what their concerns are and what great ideas they might have," she said. "As a board member, I plan on visiting every one of the schools at least once a month and making myself available to hear what the parents have to say, the teachers have to say and the kids have to say."

Alcala, 53, is married. She and her husband own (but don't themselves run) a business that distributes "interlock" systems which can be installed on cars to prevent the ignition from working if the driver fails a breathalyzer test for alcohol. The couple lives in The Rivers, a north-city subdivision.

Alcala doesn't currently have any children or grandchildren in Washington Unified School District schools. But her kids went to school locally and have earned college degrees. Alcala holds an Associates of Arts degree in Sacramento before having to leave college and help support her family.

Alcala is the president of the local Democratic club and is active in the Chicano-Latino caucus of the state Democrats. Earlier this year, Alcala unsuccessfully challenged local Yolo County Supervisor Oscar

Final sprint

Over the weekend, West Sacramento's riverfront may have been taken over by 'Sactoberfest' revelers, celebrating German beer and associated pleasures.

But on Sunday, it was a few hundred rowers that provided the invasion at the Port of West Sacramento. The occasion was the annual 'Head of the Port' regatta hosted by the local River City Rowing Club (RCRC).

Singles and multi-person crews churned down a three mile race course (taking around 20 minutes, give or take) sometimes facing into a brisk north breeze and choppy waters.

Highlights for the local club and for the UC Davis rowing teams included a victory for RCRC's girls varsity eight over rival Marin Rowing Association and a win by the UCD men's four over visitors including California Maritime Academy, Sonoma State, Sacramento State and Norcal Crew.

RCHS journalists get Q&A with state official

By Laura Asatryan and Rebecca Schwartz
River City High School Journalism Class

A group of local high school journalism students gathered at the Department of Education in downtown Sacramento for a lively Q&A session with California State Superintendent of Public Instruction Tom Torlakson.

This event gave schools in the Sacramento area participating in the Scholastic Journalism Initiative a chance to experience real, hands-on journalism. This project is in collaboration with The Sacramento Bee and the Sacramento County Office of Education (SCOE) to restore and improve student journalism programs in California public schools, according to the SCOE website.

Students asked Torlakson questions during his current reelection campaign. Torlakson is running against opponent Marshall Tuck. Tuck's campaign advisors have also agreed to meet with the student group via video conference scheduled for the 21st.

During the conference Torlakson answered questions and spoke briefly about his personal life and experience as a former teacher and coach. He plans to further improve California schools by bringing teachers, parents, students, and the community together by investing in schools to develop smaller class sizes, stronger academics, and focusing education funding towards local schools and the educational community as opposed to politicians, according to his website.

"Our system overall is doing well. We have a lot of work to do; when we're 48th and 49th in the nation per pupil spending, that's wrong. [For] a state of this capacity, that's a disgrace in so many ways that a state of our wealth and capacity isn't investing more in education," said Torlakson.

The Superintendent also mentioned his intentions to appeal a recent court ruling that California teacher tenure laws are unconstitutional. Teacher tenure currently protects teachers who have shown a successful completion of a two year probationary period from being fired without due process.

Although supportive of teacher tenure, Torlakson remains committed to supporting high quality teachers for all students.

"We need to show the good things that are going on, the bright minds that we represent need a quality education because we know that wherever you come from, whatever faith, whatever race, geographic place of origin, that you have the potential to succeed," says Torlakson.

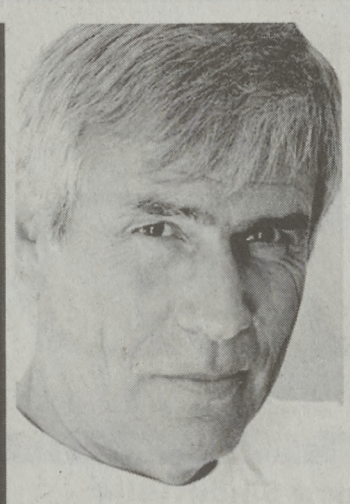
During the event, Sacramento Bee reporter Alexei Koseff, gave his thoughts on how well the student journalists performed, and while he noticed the students asking some good, well thought out questions, he had some advice to give to aspiring young journalists.

"I could tell how nervous people were to be asking some of the questions. I had the exact same problem in the beginning so you just have to work on doing as many interviews and press conferences as you possibly can. The more you do the more comfortable you'll be being the first person to speak up," said Koseff.

"Use the power of your voice and your pen to write about it [issues that are important]," said Torlakson to River City High School journalists after the conference, "You can inform your neighborhood, your school and maybe the district about this."

The 'awful roar of the mighty waters' is upon us

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

I was talking to a friend the other day and he was bemoaning the fact that his mailbox has been over-flowing lately with political advertising from all kinds of different candidates and ballot measures wanting his vote next month in the big mid-term elections.

"And if it's not my mailbox being stuffed with political flyers," said my friend, "it's my telephone ringing off the bloody hook with some phone bank message asking for my vote for this or that proposition. Plus it seems like every other ad on television or the radio is a political one and most of them are so misleading and dishonest that it's almost funny if it wasn't so sad. Do those very well-paid ad agencies who create all this garbage actually think we voters are stupid? To tell you the truth, I often decide who or what I'm going to vote for or against by how much advertising I get from their campaigns."

"What do you mean?" I asked with interest.

"Well, I simply figure that whoever or whatever has all that money to blow on political ads is being supported by the big money interests, and they are very rarely concerned with what will make my life better. And now that our beloved Supreme Court has made Citizen's United the law of the land with another one of its poorly thought-out 5-4 decisions, the floodgates are wide-open and our political system is awash in special interests money like never before. That only makes it easier for the very well-financed extremists in this country to polarize things even worse than they already are, and that is simply not good for our democracy. If we don't all start pulling on the same rope soon, we're going to have a country that can't get anything positive done politically."

Years ago, with the help of a book entitled "Founding Brothers" by Joseph E. Ellis (which my son gave me one Christmas) I was reminded that when it comes to American politics, it has (and will always be) a very loud shouting match between often ruthless adversaries who see the world very differently.

From the day our Founding Fathers pulled off their "Miracle in Philadelphia" to the present, America has always been a messy political work in progress. In fact, Ellis argues that our politicians have been essentially fighting the same battles over and over again, although they have called themselves by different names from time to time. But whether it's been the Jeffersonians vs. the Hamiltonians, or States Rights believers vs. Unionists, or Democrats vs. Republicans, or liberals vs. conservatives, true believers have never shied away from the lowest means imaginable to win the political day, and we should not be too terribly surprised or saddened when they continue to do so.

And for those who believe that politics has never been nastier than it is today and that it has now reached a point where it is destroying the average citizen's urge to participate, Ellis reminds us that today's rhetoric is nothing compared to that which was unleashed in the earliest days of our country.

"Historians have labeled the 1790s 'The Age of Passion' for good reason," writes Ellis, "for in terms of shrill accusatory rhetoric, flamboyant displays of ideological intransigence, intense personal rivalries, and hyperbolic claims of imminent catastrophe, it has no equal in American history."

Our Founding Fathers certainly didn't shy away from making things personal, either. For instance, John Adams despised Alexander Hamilton and often referred to him as "the bastard brat of a Scotch peddler"; Tom Paine, who was known to pray for George Washington's death, celebrated the father of our country's departure from the American political scene by writing, "The world will be puzzled to decide whether you are an apostate or an impostor, whether you have abandoned good principles, or whether you ever had any"; Thomas Jefferson secretly hired a poison-pen writer to publish any dirt he could find on John Adams, only to later discover that same writer penning newspaper articles paid for by his political enemies claiming Jefferson had a black mistress; and Alexander Hamilton's well-known view that he considered Aaron Burr to be "unprincipled and despicable" eventually led to a duel between the two which left Hamilton mortally wounded on a New Jersey field of honor.

Our Founding Fathers certainly didn't shy away from making things personal, either. For instance, John Adams despised Alexander Hamilton and often referred to him as "the bastard brat of a Scotch peddler."

So, you may ask, why has all this nasty political bickering continued on down through the ages? The answer turns out to be quite simple – because the stakes are so very high. America, with all its imperfections and contradictions, has always been a highly problematic project. Men freely governing themselves is not and never will be a stroll in the park. Plus whether we want to admit it or not, liberals and conservatives both have a legitimate claim on our political truth and "speak from the deepest impulses of the American Revolution."

So, with yet another important election getting closer all the time, history tells me that the political verbiage is only going to get nastier. And when it reaches the point – as it always does – when like my friend I can't stand to view one more political ad or listen to one more candidate debate, I will simply force myself to recall the following words of Frederick Douglass: "Those who profess to freedom, yet deprecate agitation, are men who want crops without plowing, rain without thunder and lightning, and the ocean without the awful roar of its mighty waters."

Big check for Boosters

A representative from Hanlees Auto Group in Davis visited River City High School two weeks ago to hand the school's athletic booster club a check for $10,000. The money came from Hanlees and the Toyota corporation.

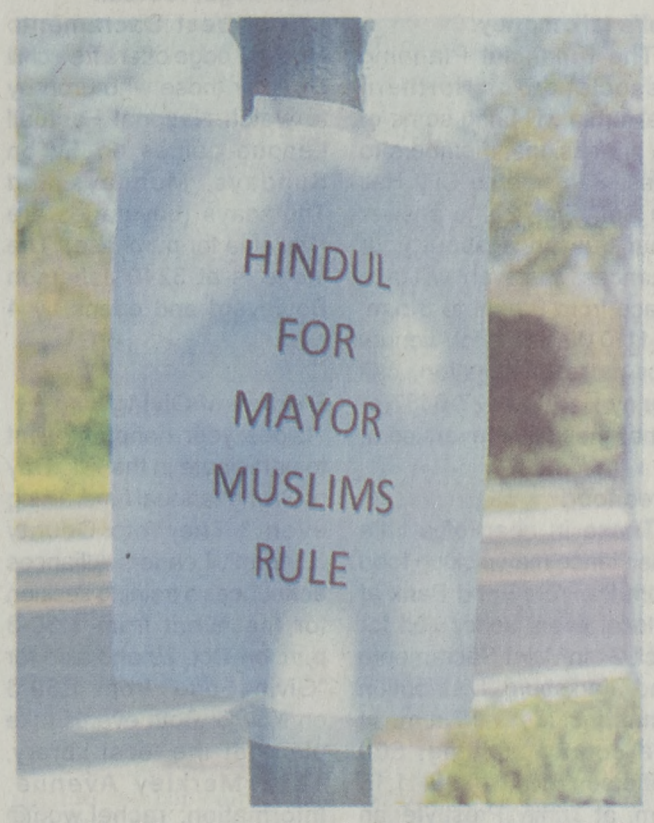
Accepting the check was December Brinsfield-Briscoe, president of the boosters. The News-Ledger later asked her if the club had ever received a donation that large before.

"Not that I'm aware of," she responded. "It was quite interesting the way that it came about. (Current) athletic director Jamie King contacted us to let us know Hanlees was interesting in doing a sponsorship for our club. The Toyota corporation contributed half the donation, and Hanlees contributed the other half."

The money will be used by the booster club to support student-athletes at the school.

"The athletic boosters provide funding and scholarships to eligible athletes," she said. "And basically, when the athletic department needs anything -- training, equipment, courses, football helmets, catcher's gear, we help."

Author Unknown:



A number of these simple signs showed up sometime prior to October 3 around Golden Gate Drive and Bridgeway Island Park. The News-Ledger spotted around ten of them in the neighborhood.

The signs are an apparent reference to the local mayor's race, in which Narinderpal Singh Hundal is challenging incumbent Christopher Cabaldon.

But Hundal is not, of course, a Muslim. He's active in the local Sikh temple.

Whether the unsigned posters are meant to influence the mayor's race one way or another, or just to engage in a religious provocation, is unclear. Police spokesman Lieutenant Tod Sockman told the News-Ledger the posters are not a matter for police investigation.

D.A. creates innocence unit

From the Yolo County District Attorney's office

Yolo D.A. Jeff Reisig announced last week that his office has created a "Conviction Integrity Unit" to review claims of innocence made after someone has locally been convicted of a crime.

"While the trial and appellate process have significant safeguards to protect individuals," said a statement from Reisig's office, "the criminal justice system is a human institution and mistakes are made in a small number of cases."

The new unit will be headed by an assistant chief deputy district attorney and will "review all claims of factual innocence made by persons who have been convicted of crimes," the D.A. reports.

"The unit will conduct an initial inquiry to determine whether further review or investigation is necessary," the statement continued. "The unit will review transcripts, evaluate forensic evidence in light of new scientific knowledge, conduct additional forensic tests, interview witnesses, or conduct any other investigation deemed necessary. . . to avoid the possibility of an innocent person being punished for a crime they did not commit."

Those wishing to have a conviction reviewed need to make "meaningful claim" of innocence. They must make their request in writing to the Yolo County District Attorney's office. The claim must not simply be an appeal for resentencing, a re-weighing of conflicting evidence, or relief from immigration consequences.

"Whether a case should be dismissed after conviction based upon factual innocence will be carefully considered," promised the D.A.'s office.

Said Reisig in the press release:

"A prosecutor's role is to ensure that our system achieves justice which includes not only convicting the guilty but also guaranteeing the protection of the innocent. The creation of this unit helps us to obtain both of these goals."

Jokes of the week:

A guy showed up to the local yoga class and asked the instructor, "Can you teach me to do the splits?"

The instructor asked, "How flexible are you?."

"I can't make Tuesdays," the guy responded.

Police arrested two kids yesterday. One was drinking battery acid, the other was eating fireworks.

Officers charged one, and let the other one off.

(Hey, we didn't say they would be "good" jokes of the week.)

COUCH THEATER DVD PREVIEWS

BY SAM STRUCKHOFF

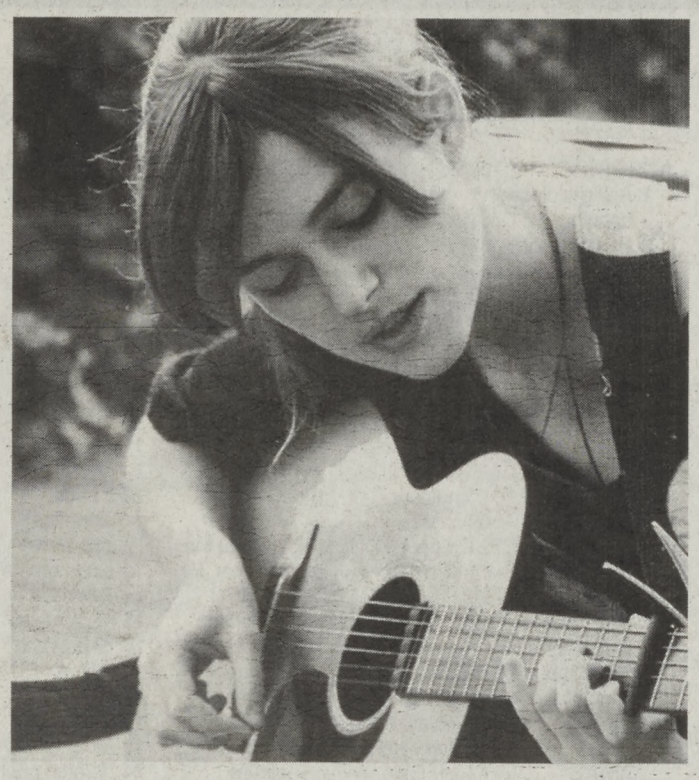
PICKS OF THE WEEK

" Begin Again" (R) -- This is one of those enchanting movies where the music almost eclipses the entire story. Greta (Keira Knightley) is a songwriter and sometimes-singer who's hit a low point, breathing her feelings into a microphone in a stale little lounge in New York City. Her voice has a deep effect on Dan (Mark Ruffalo), a disgraced music producer who's hit an even lower low. Dan convinces Greta to take a chance and produce a record with him, shunning studios and making music in the streets.

This is the follow-up feature from John Carney, the director of the wildly successful, low-budget musicians-in-love movie "Once." Carney -- a musician himself -- knows how to make audiences feel that love of music. Funny thing is, he got better dramatic performances in "Once," when his actors were musicians instead of movie stars.

"Deliver Us from Evil" (R) -- Sick of exorcism movies yet? How about a crime-solving exorcist who works for the NYPD?! Fortunately, there's a 2001 memoir by a real-life cop detailing his "experiences" fighting the supernatural. Ralph Sarchie (Eric Bana) has great cop-intuition, a smart-mouth partner (Joel McHale) and a bone to pick with the Man Upstairs. He meets up with a too-cool-for-Sunday-school renegade priest (Edgar Ramirez) who helps Sarchie realize that he should be doing the Lord's work.

Despite combining the crime drama and supernatural thriller genres, the action feels by-the-numbers. The most the movie has to offer is a climactic exorcism and a lot of sudden noises to try to fry your nerves. What's missing is the right psychological trickery to make all of that spookiness into real nightmare fuel.



Keira Knightley in "Begin Again"

"Life of Crime" (R) -- Frank Dawson (Tim Robbins) has a lot of money, a gorgeous wife (Jennifer Aniston) and a team of bumbling career-criminals plotting to kidnap her for a huge ransom. The masterminds didn't realize one important detail: Frank is an amoral slob who can save a lot of money if his wife disappears, since he wants to get rid of her and go full-time with his enthusiastic mistress in South Beach. It's an uncomfortable realization for the kidnappers and the wife, really. This crime-comedy unfolds into a full-on confusing caper. The chuckles are worth the rental fee.

DOG OF THE WEEK

"The Prince" (R) -- Since "Taken" was such a surprise hit, we've been stuck in a pain-parade of shoddily made Dad-gets-revenge flicks. Hopefully, this last lump indicates that we're near the end. Paul (Jason Patric) is your generic knife-jawed protagonist, playing it safe as a mechanic with presumably dark secrets in his past. You know the drill: Baddies kidnap innocent daughter; Dad grunts his way through a homicidal rampage until the credits roll. John Cusack, who plays a brooding buddy to the boring hero, looks like he's in literal agony from being on-screen. Bruce Willis plays a bad guy who looks about as bored as the audience.

"WKRP In Cincinnati: The Complete Series"
"Vera, Set 4"
"Masterpiece: Death Comes to Pemberley"
"Big Valley -- Season 4"

It is almost impossible to imagine American pop culture without or before "The Simpsons." Since its debut in 1989, the animated cartoon has become one of the most influential forces in television and comedy history, and has broken records all along the way. For example, it is the longest-running primetime, scripted television series, and the Simpson family and the various characters from the series are recognized throughout the world.

Matt Groening, the creator and executive producer of the Emmy Award-winning series, has compiled an incredible book that is the last word in fan memorabilia. Groening reveals all of the seminal events that turned this so-called average family into the pop-culture phenomenon it has become.

The large-format book is richly illustrated and the perfect way to mark the 25th anniversary of one of the most consistently entertaining, enlightening and inventive shows in the history of television.

As Groening points out, he has been doodling misshapen, bulgy-eyed cartoon characters with tragic overbites since the sixth grade. Thirty years ago, while occupying a studio bungalow on the 20th Century Fox lot in Los Angeles, he pitched his idea for a series of animated short films. Those first films eventually became 550 episodes spread over 26 seasons. This in addition to a hit feature film, a dozen video games, a couple of breakfast cereals and, of course, its place in our culture.

"The Simpson Family History" is, indeed, a celebration of television's favorite family. It is an absolute joy and chock full of art taken from the source. Light the anniversary candles, and let the party begin.

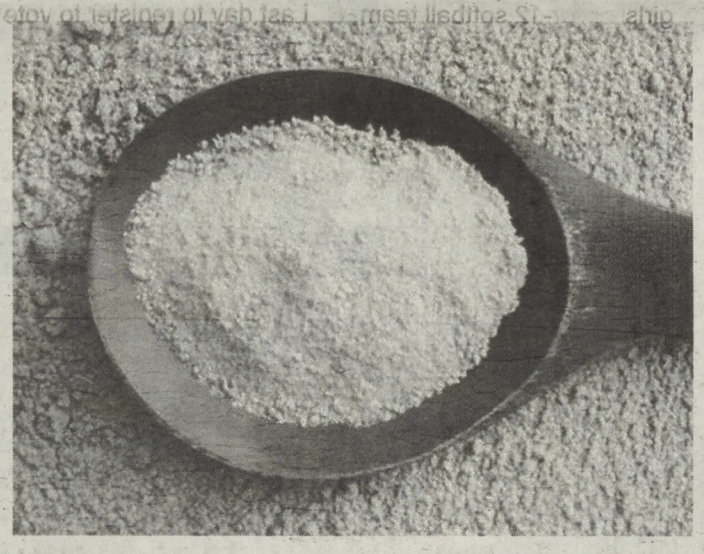
The Kitchen Diva BY Angela Shelf Medearis

The Spice World's Golden Treasure



Curry is a heady melange of spices and pungent root vegetables that come together to form a symphony of flavors that create the essence of the blend. Yet when you hear the word "curry" you might assume it refers to a dish popular in Indian cuisine. Curry is used in countless ways in cuisines all over the world -- from Asia to Europe, the Caribbean and South America.

The amalgamation that is curry, in all its forms, represents the spice world coming together in an exotic and piquant melting pot of flavors extracted from pods and seeds, peppers, wine, ginger and garlic. The vast array of ingredients represented in curries hails from Asia and its subcontinents. But these highly coveted seasonings eventually made their way to the rest of the world.

Curry is an immigrant that became a naturalized citizen in many countries, with a unique version born in each new land. As the foundation of spices that constituted the original curry moved from one place to the next, the curries themselves took on different qualities.

Many curries are the color of gold, and it is an interesting coincidence, because the curry spices at one time traded as if they were gold. For thousands of years, humans have valued the qualities of aromatic plants. Spices were coveted everywhere and used in everything from cuisine to medicines.

In Asia, spices moved across the continent by land, and were the heart of an important and lucrative commerce. Hundreds of years after that, with the invention of sophisticated navigational vessels, explorers and traders took to the seas, along with their prized cargo of spices.

The curries we see today are descendants of mixtures that date back 4,000 years. Thanks to archeological advances, scientists can determine what our ancestors ate by examining skeletons and ancient pieces of pottery. We know that even then, a form of curry was part of the primitive culinary landscape. While curries vary from place to place, they all seem to have evolved from the basic spices of ginger, garlic and turmeric. Curries can consist of countless ingredients, from cumin and coriander to hot chilies and lemongrass.

While some curries are dry, most are added to a stew, combined with actual curry, bay or lime leaves, and vegetable, beef or chicken stock or coconut milk. There is a strong history of meat in these stews, but many curries are vegetarian.

QUICK CURRIED VEGETABLES

This recipe can be adapted to fit the seasons. Cubes of squash, pumpkin, sweet potatoes, broccoli florets or tender greens all work well.

2 teaspoons olive or vegetable oil
3 tablespoons mild curry powder (recipe below or bottled brand)
1 large onion, chopped (about 1 1/2 cups)
1 large bell pepper, seeded, ribs removed and sliced into strips
4 cloves garlic, peeled and chopped
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon black pepper
3 tablespoons tomato paste
1 (13.5-ounce) can reduced-fat coconut milk
1 cup low-sodium vegetable or chicken broth
3 medium-size red-skinned potatoes (about 1 pound), scrubbed and cut into 1-inch chunks
1 (9-ounce) package frozen cut green beans
1 small cauliflower, cut into small florets (about 4 cups)
1/2 cup frozen green peas
1/4 cup chopped cilantro
1 to 2 tablespoons fresh lime juice

1. Heat oil in large saucepan over medium-high heat. Add curry powder and cook, stirring for about 30 seconds. Add the onion, bell pepper, garlic, salt and pepper, and cook 5 minutes, or until golden brown, stirring frequently. Add tomato paste and cook for 2 minutes.

2. Stir in coconut milk and broth. Bring to boil. Add potatoes, reduce heat to medium, cover and cook 15 minutes, or until potatoes are still firm but almost done.

3. Stir in green beans and cauliflower. Cover, and cook 5 minutes more, or until vegetables are tender. Remove from heat. Stir in peas, cilantro and lime juice. Serve with white or basmati brown rice, if desired. Serves 6.

MILD CURRY POWDER

2 tablespoons ground cumin
2 tablespoons ground coriander
2 teaspoons ground turmeric
1/2 teaspoon crushed red pepper flakes
1/2 teaspoon mustard seed
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger

In a blender or food processor, combine cumin, coriander, turmeric, red pepper flakes, mustard seed and ginger. Process to a fine powder. Store in an airtight container. Makes 1/4 cup.

You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. Chairez: story on film

A local team is working on a documentary about River City High School graduate Joe Chairez.

According to the school's web page, in 2000 Chairez was "living his dream" and nearing the end of his field training as a Sacramento police officer when he collapsed after he handcuffed a suspect. He died the following day.

At River City, Chairez had served as class president and had played golf and football.

The film "Joe238" is planned to tell the story of how Chairez's tragedy was turned into hope for others after his family decided to donate his organs. Among those interviewed for the film is RCHS coach Chris Baker.

The film is directed by Colleen Stymeist-Wood and produced by Lizet Fernandez. You can find more information about it at www.joe238.com or on Facebook (look for "joe238").

Villegas for his seat.

Her community involvement also involves volunteer duties with Holy Cross Church..

"I've always been involved in the schools since my children were young, and I've always been on the board of the PTA for my children's schools," she explained. "I continued that with my grandchildren."

Last year, when a grandchild was attending Westmore Oaks Elementary School, Alcala helped out there, wielding a broom and mop to refurbish a school room.

"I went in there and swept windows, I cleaned window boxes that hadn't been used. It became a beautiful functional room that everybody could use. I helped my daughter with a (school) carnival, with movie nights they had, with a library affair, and with every (school) function."

Alcala supports Measure V – the school bond on November's ballot. She believes local student test scores are headed up, and local teachers are dealing well with the new "Common Core" curriculum mandates. She also believes Washington Unified is responsibly managing its money.

"My understanding is it's probably the best fiscally maintained district in Yolo County," said Alcala. "It's been very carefully managed. . . the majority of the monies are going to the children."

The local teachers union has endorsed Alcala along with incumbent board member Sarah Kirby-Gonzalez (who is a teacher working in a different district).

"I've been endorsed by the teachers as well as Sarah, because they know of our strong commitment to education," said Alcala. "She's a teacher, but I've always been involved in the schools at a lot of levels."

Alcala doesn't wish to change the district's priorities, but she does allow that she would like to see more programs in the arts and "perhaps more labs" to prepare local kids for jobs of the future. And she would like to find more grant money and more private partners – perhaps, as an acquaintance in another school district reports, to provide local children with refurbished computers they can take home.

Alcala also said West Sacramento – despite the honors it has received for promoting "universal preschool" – doesn't really have universal preschool. Not every family is choosing it.

"We have wonderful (preschool) programs here, but we don't have universal preschool," she explained. "Universal preschool would mean that every child of that age would have it. We have to do that outreach. The (educational) foundation is so important."

Alcala finds herself on the November 4 ballot facing off with Kirby-Gonzalez and Josh Alves.

Voters will be asked to pick two of them for the board of trustees on Washington Unified School District.

CASE NUMBER PB14-165

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Jan William Snyder, aka Jan Snyder, Jan W. Snyder, J.W. Snyder:

A Petition for Probate has been filed by Harry E. Snyder in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.

The Petition for Probate requests that Harry E. Snyder be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.). The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows: Oct. 29, 2014, at 9:00 a.m. in Superior Court of California, County of Yolo, 725 Court St., Woodland CA 95695.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

LYON: zeroing in on homeless issues from page 1

neighbors had been the victim of a crime from a homeless person."

And a nearby church was exacerbating the problem, he felt, by "feeding the homeless seven days a week and giving them clothes and camping supplies."

"It was a daily parade of homeless people coming from the river. Since our house is right on their travel corridor, they'd come by twice a day, back and forth," Lyon added. "Whenever you have them coming by, you have the resultant activity, which can include everything from public urination, to drinking in public, drugs in public, shouting each other, fighting – there were many fights in the church."

Lyon said he encouraged the church's landlord to sell, and encouraged the new landlord – developer Mark Friedman – to terminate the church's lease while the property awaited a new use. The church is gone now.

But the experiences led Lyon to become a spokesperson for the loosely-formed Washington Neighborhood Association, and he has been to the city council to lobby for a crackdown on illegal activities many times since moving in.

The group's "action plan" for the homeless situation (you can see it at Lyon's website, www.CleanUpWestSac.com) includes three piers, said Lyon. The first is "compassion" in attacking the homeless issue.

"If a homeless person wants food, shelter, substance abuse training, job training, mental health services, we're going to get them to that service," he explained. "Right now, Yolo County has services for each of those needs. . . We don't need to replicate those services in West Sacramento."

"Enforcement" is the second tenet of the plan. Lyon wants the local city and police to "make it clear we will not tolerate illegal camping in this city."

And the third element?

"The third part of that plan is that we are going to elect representatives to the city council who support our cause, it's as simple as that."

Reducing the city's crime rate is, in fact, Lyon's number one priority. Currently, the city's leaders have assigned "flood protection" to that number-one spot.

"I think that flood protection is a high priority, but not higher than public safety," argues Lyon. Let's say (flood protection) is second to public safety. . . Everything else is secondary because it does not do us any good to have new streetcars, new hotels or new development if 100 percent of the citizens do not feel safe 100 percent of the time."

The council's response to Lyon's arguments has been silence, he said, and that's part of why he gives the current council poor marks for its job performance.

"In general, the city council of West Sacramento is doing a lousy job, and I'll tell you why," he commented. "The main reason is I've publicly asked them in one of my speeches to meet with myself and my neighbors here in the Washington neighborhood to talk about our concerns about the homeless. We got no response. They completely rebuffed us."

Nevertheless, he believes he can work with the incumbents if he's elected to serve with them.

"I believe in the democratic process, which is majority rule," he commented. "It's my goal to win over each member of the city council to the way of the people's thinking. When I get elected, they will see that my main priority is public safety. I'm going to reach out to get them aboard."

Lyon supports the city's development plans:

"Any development of the City of West Sacramento, whether it's the Bridge District, Southport, the new hotels – they're okay as long as public safety is the top priority and crime is reduced."

He has a couple of other primary goals.

"One is to roll out the red carpet for businesses that create jobs," Lyon said. "I built a restaurant in Texas 20 years ago and my permit only cost me $500. . . I couldn't have opened my restaurant if I had to pay $50,000, $70,000 or $100,000 in fees like they do here in California or West Sacramento."

In the 20 years since that restaurant opened, he reports, it has paid over $2 million in local sales tax, $180,000 in property taxes and "the best benefit is that my restaurant has employed 40 people for over 20 years."

So Lyon would like to reduce business fees "as low as I can get them."

He also hopes to "right-size" the city government, after doing a study of work flow at city hall.

"When I got to be chief of my section at (Department of General Services), it was the first time in history they reduced the size or downsized the staff," he said. That happened after he studied the work flow and made a recommendation to reduce staff, by attrition.

If similar studies show there are too many people in one department or not enough at another in city hall, he said, changes could be made. Layoffs won't be necessary.

"We don't have to fire anybody," said Lyon. "Through attrition, we just don't have to backfill anybody."

Lyon, 58, lives in his north-city home with his wife, Grace. They have five adult children in their blended family, all living outside the home.

Lyon lived in different areas while growing up, and earned bachelor's of science degrees in both chemistry and chemical engineering. He has worked for oil companies as an engineer, in public affairs and in real estate management.

He worked for the state's Department of General Services office (two blocks from his current home in West Sacramento) for about 13 years before retiring this year.

Other candidates seeking the two available seats on next month's city council ballot are incumbents Mark Johannessen and Chris Ledesma as well as fellow challenger Nancy Heth-Tran.

Climate change is a national security issue. The longer we wait to act, the harder it will be to mitigate and respond to its impacts. U.S. leadership alone will not guarantee global cooperation. But if we fail to take action now, we will have little hope of influencing other countries to reduce their own contributions to climate change, or of forging a coordinated international response.

Here at home, we must cut our own carbon emissions, reduce our reliance on foreign oil, and develop and deploy clean, renewable energy sources that will generate economic growth. We must also help less developed countries adapt to the realities and consequences of a drastically changed climate. Doing so now will help avoid humanitarian disasters and political instability in the future that could ultimately threaten the security of the U.S. and our allies. But most importantly, we must transcend the political issues that divide us — by party and by region — to devise a unified American strategy that can endure and succeed.

We, the undersigned Republicans and Democrats, believe Congress working closely with the Administration must develop a clear, comprehensive, realistic and broadly bipartisan plan to address our role in the climate change crisis. WE MUST LEAD.

NOTICE OF PETITION TO ADMINISTER ESTATE OF Robert M. Nannini, Decedent CASE NUMBER PB14-164

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Robert M. Nannini:

A Petition for Probate has been filed by Jaymie L. Nannini in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.

The Petition for Probate requests that Jaymie L. Nannini be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

The petition requests authority to administer the estate under the Independent Administration of Estates Act. (This authority will allow the personal representative to take many actions without obtaining court approval. Before taking certain very important actions, however, the personal representative will be required to give notice to interested persons unless they have waived notice or consented to the proposed action.) The independent administration authority will be granted unless an interested person files an objection to the petition and shows good cause why the court should not grant the authority.

A hearing on the petition will be held in this court as follows: Oct. 28, 2014, at 9:00 a.m. in Dept. 2, Superior Court of California, County of Yolo, 725 Court St., Woodland CA 95695, Family Law.

If you object to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

If you are a creditor or a contingent creditor of the decedent, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within the later of either (1) four months from the date of first issuance of letters to a general personal representative, as defined in section 58(b) of the California Probate Code, or (2) 60 days from the date of mailing or personal delivery to you of a notice under section 9052 of the California Probate Code.

Other California statutes and legal authority may affect your rights as a creditor. You may want to consult with an attorney knowledgeable in California law.

You may examine the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a "Request for Special Notice" (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. A "Request for Special Notice" form is available from the court clerk.

You will be bidding on a lien, not on the property itself. Placing the highest bid at a trustee auction does not automatically entitle you to free and clear ownership of the property. You should also be aware that the lien being auctioned off may be a junior lien. If you are the highest bidder at the auction, you are or may be responsible for paying off all liens senior to the lien being auctioned off, before you can receive clear title to the property. You are encouraged to investigate the existence, priority, and size of outstanding liens that may exist on this property by contacting the county recorder's office or a title insurance company, either of which may charge you a fee for this information. If you consult either of these resources, you should be aware that the same lender may hold more than one mortgage or deed of trust on the property. NOTICE TO PROPERTY OWNER: The sale date shown on this notice of sale may be postponed one or more times by the mortgagee, beneficiary, trustee, or a court, pursuant to Section 2924g of the California Civil Code. The law requires that information about trustee sale postponements be made available to you and to the public, as a courtesy to those not present at the sale. If you wish to learn whether your sale date has been postponed, and, if applicable, the rescheduled time and date for the sale of this property, you may call or visit the Internet Web site, using the file number assigned to this case 14-000998. Information about postponements that are very short in duration or that occur close in time to the scheduled sale may not immediately be reflected in the telephone information or on the Internet Web site. The best way to verify postponement information is to attend the scheduled sale. www.Auction.com or call (800) 280-2832 Or Aztec Foreclosure Corporation (877) 257-0717 www.aztectrustee.com P1113294 10/1, 10/8, 10/15/2014
